

1,000 / 40 for 40: Day SIX

The two ladies farthest to the left are Jaimi and Christiana. Maria is not in this picture and we haven't met the others yet.

Prayer Requests

- Broken record - keep praying for his back and my hip. We're able to do everything we need to do to live but it's very uncomfortable. We would love to get back to when it wasn't painful to do all of those things! But at least neither of us are laid out anymore!
- Tomorrow we will learn the bus system!! One of the Ebbers' kids will show us the ropes so we can get into Brasov more easily for our language school starting next week! Pray that we will understand the system and be able to pay attention even with the kiddos with us so we won't get lost! We're excited for this step because we feel like it will bring us a bit more independence to get where we need to go!
- Yay!!! The language school accepted our preferred tutoring times!! So starting on Monday we'll begin classes. On Mondays and Wednesdays two of the Ebbers kids will babysit so Derek and I can go to class together. Then on Tuesday/Thursday/Friday one of us will go in the morning and the other in the afternoon. We'll trade off so that each of us gets to spend time with the kids and each of us gets a break with naptime in the afternoons! Pray for our kids to adjust well to the babysitting (they already love Hannah and Elijah!), that the scheduling will work out well, and that we would really soak up the language well!
- Today I'm 20 weeks pregnant!! And if you're on his list, you get info before everyone else. Our baby boy will be named Denton! We haven't decided on a middle name but please pray for me and little Denton!

Who We Met

There are three elderly women who sit on the wall right outside of our house (pictured above). We met them the other night. Their names are Christiana, Jaimi (pronounced Yaymee) and Maria. Maria is the most talkative. All three of them are so sweet and we've seen them here past three nights in a row.

Last night they taught us a few new words, like the days of the week (I've already forgotten most of them - except Monday and Sunday!), the moon, the sun, and light. They're so sweet and just love our kids, especially Elins "hair!" They all wear head scarves, too, so they must feel a kindred spirit!

Please pray for this trio - that we would learn from them and learn to love them. Pray that the Lord would speak to them in His still, small voice as they grow in
